DAPHNE BLUNT, 16

Fanlala Fashionista

She's an actress, singer, writer and fashion correspondent – is there anything Daphne Blunt can't do? Her AOL/Fanlala series Daphne's Look of the Week gives viewers the latest scoop on teen celeb fashion and she also covers pop culture on Fanlala's The Feed. Did we mention how much we <3 her self-titled fashion blog on Wordpress? But there's more to this girl than an eye for style. She starred in Radio Disney's web series My Dream and before she even hit her teens her single "Crush Rush" hit the top spot on the pop charts.

"When someone tells me I can't do something, I try even harder to do whatever it is, to show that I can do anything."

"I have been called bossy before, but I take that as a compliment. I am a strong, positive young woman and I know how to be a leader and that's a good thing."

EMILY ABRAMS, 19

Loving Food & the Planet

After studying environmental science in high school, recent grad Emily Abrams came to believe that climate change is her generation's defining issue. She decided to combine her concern for the ecology with her passion for food, and the recently released Don't Cook the Planet was born. The book is filled with Emily's tips on reducing your carbon "food"-print, as well as recipes from well-known chefs, celebs and activists who share her interest in reversing climate change.

"Five years from now I hope to have graduated from USC (she'll be a freshman this fall) and to be doing something that I love. To be honest, I'm only 19! I don't think I'm supposed to know what I want to be doing in five years. I hope to figure that out in the next four."

BETHANY LOOI, 18

Bethany Looi loves traveling, social media, Spanish language and iPhone photography. That makes her a lot like many other teenage girls. She runs her own online social media management and virtual assistant business AND blogs about social media and travel on her self-titled website—that sets her apart from the pack. That, and the fact that she has already visited 26 countries.

International Busy-ness

Up next for Bethany: a journey on the Trans Mongolian Railway through Russia and China, writing a book, learning more and expanding her business.

"I'm on a mission to speak Spanish fluently. While in Paraguay, I was asking a lady at a convenience store for toothpaste. I ended up getting funny looks from people in the store. Somehow, I later found out, I was telling the lady to go hang herself! Something got lost in translation . . ."
